JOHN GALSWORTHY says:
(of Conrad's Books in 1908)

The writings of these ten books is probably the only writing of the last twelve years that will enrich the English language to any great extent.

WINSTON CHURCHILL says:

I have long been an admirer of his work, and it will make me very happy if, through your efforts, his books shall get that attention here which they so richly deserve.

H. G. WELLS says:

One of my chief claims to distinction in the world is that I wrote the first long appreciative review of Joseph Conrad's work.

MR. HUEBSCH SOLICITS YOUR ORDER FOR THE FOLLOWING NEW IMPORTANT PUBLICATIONS:

Sanine by Michael Artzibashef

This remarkable work of fiction, already translated into every modern language, is regarded by William Lyon Phelps as "the most sensational novel that has come out of Russia in the last five years." Many regard the hero as the incarnation of the Nietzschean ideal. Translated by Percy Pinkerton; with an introduction by Gilbert Cannan. ($1.35 net.)

Dramas Volume V by Gerhart Hauptmann

(Symbolic and Legendary Dramas) including Schluck and Jau; And Pippa Dances; Charlemagne's Hostage. This translation of three of the great dramatist's best works will be eagerly welcomed by the growing audience to which the four earlier volumes appealed so strongly. ($1.50 net.)

Reflections on Violence by Georges Sorel

The doctrine of the General Strike and the philosophy of the syndicalist movement are presented by the leader of this aspect of modern thought. The contemporary political, philosophical, and economic literature of Europe bears the impress of Sorel's thinking now for the first time presented in English. Translated by T. E. Hulme. ($2.25 net.)

What Nietzsche Taught by W. H. Wright

Sympathy and familiarity equip the author for this summary of the eighteen volumes of Nietzsche. Each book is epitomized and its purpose explained, and each is represented by copious excerpts. Invaluable for those unable to make an exhaustive study of Nietzsche but who wish to understand him. ($2.00 net.)

SECOND-HAND BOOKS IN COPYRIGHT RELATION.

IT has been decided in a series of adjudicated cases that sheets of copyright works or copies of the same, purchased under usual conditions, may be re-bound into other dress without infringement of copyright and without unfair competition with the original publisher; and this decision has been applied to second-hand books, school books especially, renovated and re-bound by other than the original publisher. These cases are summarized in "Bowker on Copyright," page 263. But a novel point has been raised in a recent case where not only was there renovation and re-binding but where missing parts were supplied by reprinting, and this has been made the subject of so clear and sound a decision by a Federal judge that we reprint the opinion in full elsewhere.

In this case the Apollo Publishing Company of Reading, Pa., practically a binding concern specializing in the rebinding of school books (which is not to be confused with the Apollo Company made famous in connection with the "canned music" cases), had reissued a number of the Ginn text books, plainly stamped with a re-binding notice which was required by a previous court decision as a preventive of unfair competition with the original issue by the original publisher. This company had, however, gone a step further by reprinting missing title pages or other pages or maps to make the re-bound copies complete as well as clean. The court decided that while there was no unfair competition in selling renovated copies the defendant had gone beyond its rights and had infringed the copyrights of the original publishers by reprinting portions of the book and thus infringing the exclusive right to copy.

The decision is in line with good law and good sense. Unless the court protects copyright proprietors in this way, there might be competition as in the old story of the jack-knife whose blade first and whose handle afterward were replaced. Somewhat of such replacement is permitted under patent law where the purchaser of the patented article has a right to repair to the extent of replacing a broken part, but this right could not be exercised to the extent of remaking a part patented in itself, and in the case of a copyright the substantial parts of the work are specifically protected under the copyright. The decision is therefore to be welcomed as clearing new ground in the interests of the substantial protection of literary property.

BINDER CANNOT REPRINT MISSING PAGES OF A SECOND-HAND COPYRIGHTED WORK.

AN equity case (Ginn & Company vs. Apollo Publishing Company) involving a novel point of copyright law came up last year for adjudication before the U. S. district court for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania. In effect the court ruled that a binder or second-hand bookseller has full right to resell, rebind or "clean or renovate" second-hand books, but that he cannot, if the book is copyrighted, reprint and supply missing title pages or other matter. The full text of the decision, which is of interest to the retail trade as well as the publisher, has just reached us. Judge Dickinson says:

The specific findings of fact and conclusions of law involved in the trial of this case are filed herewith. A very general statement of the facts will suffice to disclose the real questions involved.

The plaintiffs complain of two injuries of the commission of which they accuse the defendant. The one is that the plaintiffs are the victims of unfair competition, and the other is that their proprietary copyright has been infringed by the defendant.

The plaintiffs are the authors and copyright proprietors and publishers of school books. The books may be described in general terms as Frye's Geographies, Smith's Arithmetics and Cyr's Readers. The firm of Ginn & Company, one of the plaintiffs, conduct a large publishing house by which these books are printed, published and sold. All the publications are duly copyrighted. This publishing house sells only new books, the sales being necessarily confined entirely or almost entirely to the Boards of Education throughout the country who supply books of this character to the pupils in the public schools.

The defendant is primarily engaged in the business of bookbinding, and its business is largely, if not wholly, confined to the re-binding of old books. It owns the patent for an improved binding. The merit claimed for this binding is that owing to its strength and flexibility and consequent durability it is especially adapted to stand the rough usage with which books meet in the hands of children. A good part of the business carried on by the defendant consists of cleaning, renovating and re-binding old books for the owners. They do, however, an additional, if more or less incidental, business in the way of purchasing old or second-hand books and reselling them in an improved condition for use. They are in no proper sense publishers. All the re-issued books of the defendant are marked "Re-bound by the Apollo Publishing Company, Reading, Penna."

The particular complaints of the plaintiffs, under their general complaint of unfair competition, are that the defendant is publishing or at least re-selling the publications of the plaintiffs in an imperfect, mutilated and deceptive form, in that it sometimes re-issues the books with, in some instances, the title missing; in others, with the copyright notice omitted; again with maps and portions of the original text of the books gone, and at times the name of another than the real author of the book named as the author. The particular complaint, under the general complaint of an infringement of plaintiff's copyrights, is that the defendant has purchased old books with missing maps and parts of the text gone and has supplied these by copying the plaintiff's maps and re-printing portions of the text to supply the missing parts, has incorporated these re-produced parts with the old books and has sold them as the publications of the plaintiffs.

The dual character of this general complaint calls for an inquiry into two questions, first, whether the defendant has been guilty of unfair competition, and secondly, whether it has infringed upon the proprietary rights of the plaintiffs accorded them under the copyright laws.

A statement of the general rights of both parties to this controversy will be helpful as a starting point from which to discuss the points at which their respective claims of right clash.

The plaintiffs are entitled to the full protection of the law from having the trade which they would otherwise be able to command diverted to the defendant by any methods so unfair as to come within the ban of the law. In its most general statement this right is that no other publications shall be palmed off upon intending purchasers as the publications of the plaintiffs. If an intending purchaser of books has the purpose in mind to buy the publication of the plaintiffs and he is deceived into buying other publications thinking he is buying those of the plaintiffs, an injury is done to the plaintiffs which the law can and should redress. In order "to promote the progress of science and the useful arts" and to encourage authors and publishers to develop their talents and to undergo the labor and expense of producing original works which will be of value because of the benefit and advantage thereby accruing to the people, the law has granted an exclusive proprietary right to authors and publishers to all such publications. In the assertion of this right they should at all times receive full and adequate assistance from the law. Out of these rights, however, and indeed in order to give them full expression, grow the rights of the purchasers of such publications. One of these rights is the right to re-sell a book when once purchased. This right should likewise be full and untrammeled. Another right incidental to it is the right to care for and keep in good condition the books thus purchased. This necessarily gives the right to renovate, clean and re-bind. What they can do for themselves they can rightfully secure the services of others to do for them. This in turn involves a right of another kind which is to purchase second-hand books and to do with them what the original purchaser had the right to do, one of which things is the right to vend them without or after renovation. While it is doubtless true that the part of the purchasing public which is thus supplied with second-hand books is withdrawn from the market for the purchase of new publications, a purchaser of books and a second-hand dealer in books (where there is no attempt to pass off the one for the other) cannot be said in any proper sense of the term to be in competition. Where there is no competition there can be no unfair competition, and it would seem to follow therefore, that as the plaintiffs, so far as they are dealers, deal wholly in new publications and the defendant, so far as it is a dealer, deals wholly in second-hand books, they are not in competition the one with the other. The charge of unfair competition must therefore fall.

The claim of infringement of copyright stands, however, upon a different footing. This is what may be termed a conventional and artificial right. This is a right conferred by the law in pursuance of a policy of its own and may therefore and does extend so far as the law has decreed it shall extend in the promotion of its policy. It is manifest that this law must be futile and fail in its purpose if the publication of one who has put his talents, his time and his labor to the production of a book can be met with a book of another which is a mere copy of his own, the cost of which to the second publisher has been reduced by the saving of all the expense of the publication except what might be termed the merely mechanical part. If, therefore, the plaintiffs and the defendant were in competition in the sale of books, the test of whether there had been any infringement of the right of the plaintiffs would be whether any forbidden use had been made of the plaintiffs' publications.

One obstacle in the way of the court yielding assent to the argument for the plaintiffs is that it seems to lead to a conclusion which cannot be accepted. In other words, it proves too much. If the right of a purchaser of the plaintiffs' publication is, as it would seem must be conceded, to re-sell a book purchased by him, after his use of it had ended, the one argument of the plaintiffs being that the sale of the book with any of its parts missing is an infringement of the plaintiffs' right because it is unfair competition, and the other argument being that the sale of the book with the missing parts supplied is a legal injury to the plaintiffs because it is an infringement of their copyright, then the conclusion is inevitable that a purchaser loses the right of resale altogether unless the book which he resells is perfect in all its parts. This would be to restrict and limit the rights of the purchaser to an extent which would be unfair to him and be a deprivation of a right which he is conceded to possess. The soundness of the second argument adduced, however, is not necessarily impaired by the finding of the first to be unsound. This, therefore, resolves the whole question into this: Is the copying into a second-hand book of a map or a small portion of the text of the original publication which may be missing and the selling of the book with its replaced parts as a second-hand book an infringement of the plaintiffs' copyright?

This is a question which must be determined by a fair construction of the Acts of Congress on the subject of copyrights as interpreted in the light of the decided cases. Upon this question, the cases which deal with new publications which have had incorporated in them portions of a copyrighted work afford us some general aid. It would seem at first sight that the two acts are not the same either in purpose or in the thing done except in the particular that in each case a part of the copyrighted publication has been re-produced.

In the one case the intention and purpose is to sell a second-hand copyrighted book for what it is and to perfect it by supplying the missing parts. In the other, the intention and purpose of the offending publisher is to make a market for his publication by availing himself of some of the labors of the publisher whose previous work has been copyrighted and to this extent to sell the product of the labor of the first publisher as his own and to reap the profits. The gravamen of each offense, however, is the same. Each has the right to sell that which is his. Neither has the right to make his own property more valuable or more salable by incorporating with it any part of the property of another.

The man who is a purchaser of a copyrighted book may re-sell it for what it is without any infringement of the copyright laws. Doan et al. vs. American Book Co., 105 Fed., 772. He may re-bind or otherwise improve its condition or appearance for the purposes of a re-sale without being guilty of unfair trade provided he does not palm it off as the publication of the original publishers. Ibid.

The other man unquestionably has the right to sell his own publication without the pirated parts.

There does not seem to be any adjudged case in which the precise point here presented has been raised. If, however, it would have been an infringement of the plaintiffs' copyright to have incorporated in an original publication as much of the copyrighted books as was added to the second-hand books to supply the missing parts, then the doing of this would be a like infringement.

There are many cases of new publications to serve us as illustrations, but the precise point to be ruled upon here must be decided without any decided case which is on all fours with this to guide us.

This point of the present case must therefore of necessity be disposed of as one of "the first impressions." The purpose and intent of the copyright law is "to give to authors the exclusive right to" the productions of their brains when reduced to the form of writings and to this end they are given by the Acts of Congress "the sole liberty of printing, re-printing, publishing, completing, copying" and of "vending the same." The right thus given is further defined by Congress as an "exclusive right." It is by other provisions of the law forbidden to others than the author to print, publish or sell a copy of any such work. It must be that the proprietary right thus given to the author in the whole likewise extends to all its parts. When a copyrighted book is published and sold, however, something is necessarily given to the purchaser and acquired by the general public. One thing acquired is the fact that the author has expressed certain thoughts. This is a fact in literature of which anyone is free to avail himself as he is of any fact made public. It can be commented upon and discussed and the author's work re-produced so far as to make the comments intelligible. The purchaser of a particular copy, as we have seen, acquires the right to re-sell it or to preserve and renovate it. Out of these acquired rights from the author and out also of the doctrine of de minimis which doubtless also applies, grows the necessity of drawing the line between the lawful and the forbidden use of copyrighted publications. There would surely be difficulty and doubtless danger in the attempt to define that line. "Omnis definitio in lege periculosa est." It is not so difficult to draw the line in particular cases of original publications. Black vs. Allen, 42 Fed., 618 gives us one illustration. Cobbett vs. Woodward Law Rep. 14 Eq., 407; Bradbury vs. Hotten Law Rep. 8 Exch. 1; Kelly vs. Hooper, 4 Jur. 21; Whittingham vs. Wooler, 2 Swans 428; and Mawman vs. Tegg, 3 Eng. Ch., 385, are cited to us as other illustrations. Any digest of copyright cases will afford many more.

It is neither so easy, nor are we favored with as many illustrations in cases of the renovation and re-selling of second-hand copies of the protected publication. The bare right to re-sell is made clear. The right to recover, re-bind and to re-place a title page has been decided, but this is at least in part upon a halting accord to the author of including the cover, binding or title page in his copyright. The expression which comes the nearest to being a statement of the rights of the author in this respect is to be found in the dictum in Harrison vs. Maynard 61 Fed., 689. It is to this effect: After ruling that "the right to restrain the sale of a particular copy of the book by virtue of the copyright statutes is gone when the owner of the copyright and of that copy has parted with all his title to it and has conferred an absolute title to the copy upon a purchaser," and that "the exclusive right to vend the particular copy no longer remains in the owner of the copyright," the opinion is expressed that "the new purchaser cannot re-print the copy. He cannot print or publish a new edition of the book." This would seem to be in accord with a sound view of the copyright law. It would seem further to follow that as he cannot reprint the book he cannot re-print any material part of it. This brings us pretty close to the acceptance of the republication cases as analogues.

Another line of cases which might seem to furnish further illustrations will be found not to supply true analogues. These are the cases arising under the patent laws. There the right to repair, to improve and to replace broken or missing parts has in some instances been permitted to the purchaser. If the right of the purchaser there had been extended somewhat further than it has the cases might be considered analagous, but under the restrictions imposed they are not. The right given to authors and publishers should be so guarded and protected as to give them the practical benefits the law meant them to receive. This certainly calls upon us, if they are to be protected against a re-production of the whole of their works, to protect them against a re-production or any part where the re-production of that part means to take from them the exclusive right to make a sale which otherwise would have been made by them. Such is the case when the work reproduced and sold is the same work which they alone have the right to produce and sell.

We have, therefore, reached the conclusion that in re-printing parts of the plaintiff's books and incorporating such reprinted parts with parts of sold copies of the same works and selling the reproduced copies as copies (as they then are) of the plaintiffs' books, the defendant has infringed upon the proprietary rights given to the plaintiffs under the copyright laws, and to this extent the plaintiffs are entitled to a decree in their favor with costs.

A decree in accordance with this opinion, and the findings of facts and conclusions of law filed herewith, may be prepared and submitted by counsel.

G. SCHIRMER TO MOVE TO LONG ISLAND CITY.

G. SCHIRMER, INC., the music publishers, have leased for a term of twenty-one years a plot of forty lots on Thomson Hill, in Long Island City, upon which they will erect a new publishing plant. The lots are located in the block bounded by Anabel Avenue, Addison Place, Gosman and Gould Avenues. This location was selected after a careful study of every available site in Long Island City, and not only is it one of the highest and driest spots on the island, but is also most conveniently situated in respect to transportation facilities, being only two short blocks from the new two-hundred-foot Queens Boulevard, as well as from the Bliss Street station of the dual rapid transit system, from which express trains will run to Broadway and 42d Street in eight minutes. Through service will be afforded to all parts of New York via the B. R. T., Interborough subway and elevated lines for a single five-cent fare.

On these forty lots a one and two-story reinforced concrete fireproof building will be erected from plans prepared by Timmis & Chapman, architects. The building will cover about 63,000 square feet, and will be 220 feet front by 290 feet in depth; the remaining portion of the plot will be used for tennis courts and a general recreation ground for the employees. The gross amount involved in the lease is about $300,000.

The plant, which will employ about five hundred persons, will be devoted to the publishing of sheet music. All of the printing presses will be placed in the one-story structure, which will have a number of skylights. The first floor of the two-story building will be used for storage, while the second story will be devoted to general business and mail-order departments.

UNIVERSITY OF CHICAGO PRESS WINS LEIPZIG EXPOSITION PRIZE.

Word has just been received by the University of Chicago from the authorities of the International Exhibition for the Book Industry and the Graphic Arts, held in Leipzig, Germany, that the State Prize has been awarded to the University for its exhibit of publications made through the University Press.

zuerkannt worden ist, und erlaubt sich hierzu die besten Glückwünsche auszusprechen.

The translation of the award is as follows:

"The Directorate of the International Exhibit for Publishers and Binders, Leipzig, 1914, is pleased to inform you that the Jury of Awards has assigned to you the State Prize for your participation in the Exposition, and takes pleasure in sending you its best wishes."

Among the hundred volumes submitted to the Leipzig Exhibition by the Press were many books by members of the faculty of the University, covering various fields of scientific research, and educational, religious, and economic subjects, besides twenty-eight volumes from the First and Second Series of the Decennial Publications and the sixteen journals published by the University Press.

BRANDEIS ARGUES BEFORE HOUSE COMMITTEE FOR PRICE-FIXING LAW.

LOUIS D. BRANDEIS, of Boston, appeared before the House Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, on January 9, in advocacy of the bill introduced by Representative Stevens, of New Hampshire, to permit manufacturers of standard articles to fix the price at which their articles must be sold by the retailer. This legislation, Mr. Brandeis said, was necessary because of the United States Supreme Court's decision that it was contrary to the public policy and a restraint of trade to permit manufacturers of such articles to fix prices.

Mr. Brandeis argued that the decision "was inadvertent" and "by a vote of 5 to 4"; that every manufacturer had a right to fix the prices of his articles, and that except for this decision the right would still exist. Mr. Brandeis said that he appeared as a "representative of the public." The measure is also urged by the American Fair Trade League of New York. "The right of a manufacturer to fix the price of his product is recognized in Massachusetts and in other States, and in practically every State which has legislated on this subject," said Mr. Brandeis.

"Every instinct of a gentleman," he said, "and every instinct of common decency is against cut-throat competition. It is a snide thing for a manufacturer to lower the price of a staple article in one community and maintain it in others."

"What effect will this proposed measure have on the cost of living?" Mr. Brandeis was asked.

"Practically none," he responded.

"It looks to me," commented Representative Adamson, "that your bill ought to be entitled 'an act to compel profits for the middleman.'"

The majority of the committee appeared to be opposed to the measure.

JOHN J. WOOD TO LECTURE TO BOOKSELLERS IN EAST AND MIDDLE WEST.

Under the auspices of the Publishers' Co-Operative Bureau, Mr. John J. Wood, the new president of the American Booksellers' Association, and the head of the Burrows Brothers Company, Cleveland, will make a tour of the Eastern cities and probably of the Middle Western cities, delivering to booksellers the talk which he gave recently before the Booksellers' League of New York on the subject of "Increasing the Sales of Books." The first tour is as follows:

Pittsburgh, January 27; Washington, January 28; Baltimore, January 29; New York Booksellers' School, January 30; Boston, February 2. Rochester and Buffalo dates are not yet settled, but they will probably be February 3d for Rochester and the 4th for Buffalo.

Mr. Wood is one of the most progressive booksellers in the country and those who heard him in New York can vouch for the practical value of his talk. Dealers within a radius of fifty or one hundred miles of the places he is scheduled to visit ought to make an effort to attend the meeting. They can get full information by addressing the following persons: Pittsburgh, W. W. Norman, care of J. R. Weldin & Company; Washington, Sidney S. Avery, care of Brentano's; Baltimore, Stanley Remington, care of Eichelberger Book Co.; New York, B. W. Huebsch, 225 Fifth Avenue; Boston, Charles E. Lauriat, Jr., care of Chas. E. Lauriat Co.; Rochester, A. C. Walker, care of Scrantom, Wetmore & Company; Buffalo, C. S. Grauer, care of Otto Ulbrich Company.

Later in February Mr. Wood will doubtless make a western tour, his itinerary including Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis, St. Louis, Louisville, Cincinnati, and other western cities.

BOOKTRADE ASSOCIATIONS.

BOOKSELLERS' LEAGUE OF NEW YORK.

THE January dinner of the Booksellers' League will be given at the Hotel Brevoort on Wednesday evening next, January 20. The guests of honor will be Thornton W. Burgess, author of the "Boy Scout Series"; Algot Lange, author of the "Amazon Jungle," who will give an illustrated lecture on his more recent adventures embodied in his later book on the "Lower Amazon"; and Reginald Wright Kauffman, the well-known writer of fiction with a social purpose. Mr. Kauffman was living at Scarborough when the town was bombarded and was also present at the bombardment of Antwerp. His address will therefore lend a special interest to an unusually interesting program.

YOUNGER SET OF THE B. C. T.

THE Younger Set of the Brotherhood of Commercial Travelers, who will gather yearly for a social night before the travel schedules call them forth, and who prefer a steak and a mug to a squab and a bottle, held their first annual beefsteak dinner at Shanley's restaurant in New York on January 6. President Patterson was the toastmaster. A handsome cravat was presented to each member as a souvenir. During the evening some excellent vocal entertainment was furnished by the Doubleday Quartette and by Messrs. Kinsey, Winters and Burger, while Mr. McCarthy rendered several of his own compositions on the piano.

As to "those present," here they are all in prim and alphabetical order: Burger, Caldwell, Clifton, Clinch, Drake, Earl, Gallon, Gehrs, Giffin, Greene, Kinsey, Leonard, Lewis, Loosler, McCann, McCarthy, McGall, McKee, McLeod, Minton, Norman, Nourse, Patterson, Remington, Savage, Seifert, Snyder, Westbrook, Winters and Ziegler.

BOSTON BOOKSELLERS' LEAGUE.

THE Boston Booksellers' League plans to hold its annual dinner at the American House, in Boston, Tuesday evening, February 2. They hope that this advance notice will enable many out-of-town booksellers to reserve that date.

The committee in charge has secured Mr. John J. Wood, of the Burrows Bros. Co., of Cleveland, as the principal speaker. His timely talk should be an inspiration, and, as president of the American Booksellers' Association, he will undoubtedly receive an old-fashioned New England welcome, and will realize that he is among friends, with him in his efforts to promote the selling of books.

It is impossible for the committee to reach every bookseller in New England with an individual invitation. It wishes you to consider this notice an invitation, and write your acceptance at once to any one of the three on the committee—Charles E. Lauriat, Jr., 385 Washington Street, Boston; H. V. Meyer, 16 Ashburton Place, Boston; or Richard Fuller, 27 Bromfield Street, Boston. The more who come —better the time.

The committee has secured special rates for this dinner: tickets will be only $1.50 each. A large attendance was assured to secure so reasonable a price. The committee is sure the booksellers will back them up.

OBITUARY NOTES.

KATHARINE COMAN, professor emeritus of economics and sociology at Wellesley College, and long prominent among women educators, died on January 11 at her home in Wellesley, following an illness of several months. Miss Coman was born in Newark, Ohio, in 1857. After graduating from the University of Michigan, she was called to Wellesley College, where she taught history until 1900, when she became professor of economics. Miss Coman retired in 1913, after her health had been impaired by several operations. She is the author of the following books: "The Growth of the English Nation," 1895; "History of England," 1899; "History of England for Beginners," 1901; "Industrial History of the United States," 1905; "Economic Beginnings of the Far West—How We Won the Land Beyond the Mississippi" (2 volumes), 1912; also, in collaboration with Katharine Lee Bates, "English History as Told by English Poets," 1902.

JOHN DENISON CHAMPLIN, eighty years old, widely known as an author, editor and historian, died of heart disease on January 9 at his home in New York City. Graduating from Yale in 1856, he was later admitted to the Connecticut bar, but subsequently gave up the law for literary work. Mr. Champlin was interested in genealogy and belonged to numerous historical and genealogical societies. He was a member of the Authors', Barnard, Century and National Arts clubs. He was the author of "Young Folks' Cyclopedia of Common Things," 1879; "Young Folks' Catechism of Common Things," 1880, 1906; "Young Folks' Cyclopædia of Persons and Places," 1880, 1899, 1911; "Young Folks' Astronomy," 1881; "Young Folks' History of War for the Union," 1881; "The Chronicle of the Coach," 1886; "Young Folks' Encyclopædia of Games and Sports" (with A. E. Bostwick), 1890; "Young Folks' Cyclopædia of Literature and Art," 1901; "Young Folks' Cyclopædia of Natural History," 1905; "The Tragedy of Anne Hutchinson," 1911; "A Hundred Families of the Seventeenth Century in England and New England," 1912. He edited: "Fox's Mission to Russia," 1873; "Cyclopædia of Painters and Paintings" (4 volumes), 1886-8; "Cyclopædia of Music and Musicians," (three volumes), 1888-90; "Liber Scriptorum," 1893. Mr. Champlin also assisted in the editing of: "The American Cyclopædia" (16 volumes), 1873-7; "The Standard Dictionary," 1892-4; "Orations, Addresses and Speeches of Chauncey M. Depew" (8 volumes), 1910. He contributed to the "Encyclopædia Britannica" and the Forum, Popular Science Monthly, Harper's and other magazines.

LUTHER S. LIVINGSTON.

In addition to the note on the death of Luther S. Livingston which appeared in the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY of January 2d, we reprint here a portion of a memorial of the well-known bookman from a recent number of the Nation:

His noteworthy career as a bibliographer, so tragically ended, began in a book-shop in Grand Rapids, and developed at the New York store of Dodd, Mead & Co., where his talent for minute, painstaking research, and his marvellously retentive memory, won him the charge of the old and rare books. By steadfast labor he became, perhaps, foremost in America in knowledge of first editions, Shakespeareana, and all the recondite details of the precious volumes sought by collectors.

To his devoted friends at Scarsdale, Mr. Livingston was better known for the wonderful garden—a botanical museum, really—that he and Mrs. Livingston developed on their three gneiss-underlaid acres, wherein were varieties not in the Hunnewell or other famous gardens, and from which a box of roots went yearly to the Bronx Botanical Garden. He had also collected orchids in Colombia, and had a large collection of butterflies.

Among book-lovers he was best known for his profoundly accurate monographs. It was his honor to have detected variations between editions previously supposed to be the same, and to discover, by slight discrepancies of type or composition, valuable facts as to the period and circumstances of publication of early editions. In such work as this he stood almost alone for precision and authority. He pursued the works of Kipling to their sources, and an article of his in the Bookman in 1899 described Kipling's first book. In 1903 he edited, with prefatory notes, reprints of original editions of Milton's "Comus," Hariot's "Virginia," and Brereton's "Virginia." The standard reference work on rare editions, "Book Prices Current," was originated and largely compiled by him; and under his supervision, annual supplements were issued. Unpublished poems of Robert Louis Stevenson he found and printed in 1912. Bibliographies of George Meredith, James Russell Lowell, and many others attest his diligent study. His comprehensive knowledge of early Americana was drawn upon by hundreds of people. In the spring of 1914 he composed and compiled a book privately printed for the Grolier Club, of which he was a member, depicting Benjamin Franklin's little-known press at Passy, in France, and the books, pamphlets, and broadsides which that unique American printed there. Another Franklin book was in process when Mr. Livingston died.

On Election Day, 1911, a fall on a cliff at his home broke two limbs, and he soon learned of an uncommon brittle quality of his bones, necessitating an existence in a wheeled-chair. With a stout heart, and with Mrs. Livingston's matchless aid, he kept at his chosen work until, last summer, digestive difficulties, œdema, and anæmia set in, resulting in a sadly depleted condition, from which on Christmas Eve, in his fiftieth year, he quietly passed from this life.

PERSONAL NOTES.

THEODORE N. VAIL AND GENERAL T. COLEMAN DUPONT are among the new directors elected for the year 1915 to the board of the Advanced Agricultural Publishing Company, publishers of The Field Illustrated, New York.

WALTER A. JOHNSON, formerly managing director for the John Lane Company, is publisher for the Advanced Agricultural Publishing Company, and Robert F. MacClelland is advertising manager.

JOSEPH A. MOORE, who has for the past six years been connected with the People's Home Journal, has sold his common stock to his partner, M. B. Gates, and retired from active management of the publication.

JOHN BIANCHI, who has been connected with the Merrymount Press since its beginning in 1893, has been taken into partnership in the business. The style of the firm will be, as heretofore, D. B. Updike, The Merrymount Press.

HENRY R. BRABROOK, manager in Glasgow for Messrs. Blackie & Son, Ltd., of London and Glasgow, expects to be in New York early in January, and letters sent to Meadows Express, 8-10 Bridge Street, will be forwarded to him.

GEORGE BERNARD SHAW is coming to this country soon, according to a message received by Granville Barker, the English actor and stage manager. Mr. Shaw writes that he hopes to arrive within a few weeks, in time for the opening of his "Androcles and the Lion," which Mr. Barker is staging.

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

BOOTH TARKINGTON'S NEW NOVEL, "The Turmoil," will be published by Harper on February 11th.

ACCORDING TO A COMPUTATION made one year ago, New York is growing sixfold faster than London, and will in a few years be the largest city in the world.

THE MACMILLAN CO. have just issued a pamphlet catalogue of their books on child welfare, the chemistry of foods, home economics, gardening, home building and other domestic subjects.

OF INTEREST, in view of recent wholesale restrictions of the sale of liquor in certain of the warring countries, is Ernest Gordon's "The Anti-Alcohol Movement In Europe," published last spring by Revell.

"THE FREE SPIRIT," a new volume of poems, with which is included a "Note on Personal Expression," by Henry Bryan Binns, the English poet and biographer, is announced by B. W. Huebsch. The "Note" partakes of the nature of a confession of faith.

THE PUTNAMS—who, by the way, are publishing Florence L. Barclay's "My Heart's Right There" to-day—announce publication, early in the spring, of "The Jester," a romance of mediæval times, by Leslie Moore, author of "The Peacock Feather."

DORAN WILL PUBLISH LATE IN JANUARY "James," a novel by W. Dane Bank—a pen-name which they say has all London guessing—and "The Magic Tale of Harvanger and Yolande," a romantic story of tourneys and fair maidens by G. P. Baker.

A. W. SHAW, publisher of System, stated to President Wilson last week that a thorough canvass of business conditions in the United States had convinced him the worst effects of the European war had passed and business was growing steadily better.

"SHORTY MCCABE ON THE JOB," a new "Shorty McCabe" story by Sewell Ford, will be published on February 1 by E. J. Clode. On the same date will appear from the same publisher "Life," a novelization of Thompson Buchanan's melodrama of that title which is now playing in New York.

AFTER FEBRUARY FIRST the publications of Desmond FitzGerald, Inc., will be supplied to the trade by Frederick Warne & Co. on the same terms as heretofore obtained with Desmond FitzGerald, Inc., direct. Mr. FitzGerald will make his headquarters when in New York at Frederick Warne & Co.'s offices.

THE HOME UNIVERSITY LIBRARY is rapidly nearing its centenary volume, the issues announced for February 13 bringing it to its ninety-fourth volume. This new group is headed with a book by David Hannay on the timely subject of "The Navy and Sea Power." The other volumes will be "The Ancient East," by D. G. Hogarth; "The Negro," by W. E. B. DuBois; and "Russian Literature," by Maurice Baring.

THE J. S. OGILVIE PUBLISHING CO. will publish shortly "Austria-Hungary and the War," by Ernest Ludwig, the Austro-Hungarian Consul at Cleveland, Ohio, with an introduction by Dumba, the national ambassador. It gives detailed particulars of the assassination of the Crown Prince and of the subsequent ultimatum—from the Austrian point of view.

WHILE BRENTANO'S followed their usual custom this Christmas of sending out an attractively boxed set of the Christmas catalogues of the various publishers, the Putnams' store sprang another departure by issuing a special, illustrated "Christmas catalogue on a new plan," containing a carefully selected list of the best books of the season from the lists of sixteen leading publishers.

AMONG THE FORTHCOMING PUBLICATIONS of the Stokes company are, on January 20, "Sir John French," an intimate account of the British leader by Cecil Chisholm; on January 29, "Before the Gringo Came," containing two stories by Gertrude Atherton of the early Spanish days in California; and, also on the 29th, "The Good Shepherd," the story of an American doctor in the Tyrol by John Roland.

IT'S A WELCOME SIGHT to see again the gold-lettered blue jacket which wraps a new Conrad book. "A Set of Six"—his latest—which appeared yesterday, contains five short stories never before published in America; and "The Duel," the sixth of the set, which was formerly published as "The Point of Honor." This new book makes the thirteenth in the list of Conrad's books published by Doubleday, Page.

"ON SUNSET HIGHWAYS," a book of motor rambles in California, will be published by the Page Company this month—just in time for the opening of the exposition. Thomas D. Murphy, the author, is known to many readers as the writer of "On Old World Highways," "Three Wonderlands of the American West," and other enjoyable motor-travel books. The Page Company is also issuing this month "The Princess and the Clan," by Margaret R. Piper, author of "Sylvia's Experiment."

"THE INDIVIDUAL DELINQUENT" has just been published by Little, Brown & Co. It is by William Healy, M.D., Director of the Juvenile Psychopathic Institute, Chicago, and is the result of the author's five-years' study at first-hand of the underlying causes of delinquency. The work discusses the conditions and causes—especially disease, heredity and environment—which lead to criminal tendencies, particular attention being paid to these influences upon children.

RAND, MCNALLY & CO. will publish, on February 1, "United States Colonies and Dependencies," a travel book by W. D. Boyce, author of "Illustrated South America," describing his wanderings in Alaska, Hawaii, the Philippines, Panama and the West Indies. At the same time will appear a new popular-priced art series, "Masters of Painting," which will be illustrated in photogravure. The following titles will be ready in this series: "Botticelli," by Julia Cartwright; "Holbein," by Ford Maddox Heuffer; "Watts," by G. K. Chesterton; and "Raphael," by Julia Cartwright.

"THE TRUTH ABOUT TWILIGHT SLEEP" will be a McBride, Nast publication of the first week in February. Hanna Rion, who is in private life Mrs. Frank Ver Beck, presents in this book all the evidence she has been able to gather, both for and against the method, of which she is, however, an advocate. She has studied the "Twilight Sleep" method at hospitals in England and Ireland, and has spent three months at Freiburg making observations and talking with physicians and patients. There and in Great Britain, and also in this country, she has consulted many mothers who have tried the new method.

ON JANUARY 23, DODD, MEAD will publish "His Official Fiancée," by Bertha Ruck (Mrs. Oliver Onions), a novel in which a typist in a London office accepts a temporary position as official fiancée of the head of the firm; "Germany's War Mania," a collection of the speeches and writings of the Kaiser, the Chancellor, von Bülow, Bernhardi, Clausewitz, Treitschke and other prominent Germans; "Life in a German Crack Regiment," by Baron von Schlicht, the novel which sold to the number of 40,000 copies in Germany before it was officially suppressed; "Between the Lines in Belgium," a boy's story of the war by Franklin T. Ames; and a new edition of G. W. Stevens' "With Kitchener to Khartum."

IT IS NO WONDER, says the New York Evening Post, that Wagner's heirs fought so hard to secure a change in the copyright laws of Germany, for their royalties during 1913 on the performances of his operas amounted to $90,227. This figure would be still more imposing had not Wagner—who was always hard up for money—sold the rights of performances of his earlier operas (which are still sung more frequently than his later ones) to no fewer than eleven of the largest German opera houses. Josef M. Jurinek has figured out that his heirs have by this transaction lost a round million dollars in the last three decades! All these figures, it must be remembered, refer simply to the royalties on the performances of Wagner's operas. The profits from the sales of scores and from the Bayreuth festivals cannot have been under $25,000 and may have been $50,000 annually.

SECRETARY OF COMMERCE REDFIELD is the latest recruit to the ranks of the prophets of prosperity. At the dinner last week of the Chamber of Commerce of the Borough of Queens, New York City, he said in so many words that he believed the United States was about to enter one of the most prosperous business periods of its history. "The world turns to us to-day for goods, for food, for raw materials," he said. "Our great competitors are busy destroying their own international trade and building up ours. Meanwhile we have been saving money. Our business debts are probably better paid up than ever before. Stocks of merchandise are low and cash is easy. Instead of having to pay our floating debt to Europe in gold, as we might have been called upon to do, we are now clearing our indebtedness with goods so that there has begun an inward flow of gold."

D. APPLETON & CO. will publish, on January 22, "The Haunted Heart," by Agnes and Egerton Castle, a story in which the course of true love runs none too smoothly; "The Mystery of Lucien Delorme," by Guy de Teramond, which tells of two mysterious murders and a man who unravels them by means of his unusual psychic powers; "Young Earnest," a story by Gilbert Cannan of a young man's revolt against the moral atmosphere of industrial England; "Red Poppies," a romance centering about a young American artist in Munich in search of the inspiration for the masterpiece which he hopes to paint; and "The Guns of Europe," Joseph A. Altsheler's new war story.

THE EMPLOYEES OF DOUBLEDAY, PAGE & COMPANY held their annual "Get-together" dinner at the Garden City Hotel on January 12. In spite of wretched weather, about 400 were present. During the dinner there were songs and recitations, with music furnished by the Doubleday, Page orchestra. An unexpected feature was the sudden entrance of the Kaiser and two aides, in full uniform. His Majesty, after announcing that his attention had been attracted by "The Kaiser" (recently published by Doubleday, Page & Company), distributed iron crosses to numerous employees, and golden crosses to the members of the firm, to himself, and to Mr. Alexander Grosset, of Grosset & Dunlap, who was the guest of the evening.

Told in an exciting style that brings out dramatic incidents and heroic personalities against that part of our history that has been warfare.

Allen, Mrs. Emma S. Afterwards. N. Y., Clode. c. '14. 447 p. D $1.25 n.

The villain, Ashley Burton, was secretly married, in name only, to Grace Eldon, his law partner's sister. Burton thought himself in command of the situation when he escaped from a wreck in which he left Eldon to die. In fact, Eldon tried to rescue a beautiful girl, and was in turn saved by her. But he had lost his memory; and for six years Helen Arlington and her guardian cared for him. In the meantime Grace Eldon and Glyndon faced tragedy: they had met and fallen in love; and now Burton, feeling safe after so many years, came back to claim Grace as his wife. At this time, Helen Arlington, in her tireless search to find who her charge was, came into their lives. Eldon and Burton faced each other. The meeting restored Eldon's memory, and settled Burton's fate.

conditions are such that the publisher has a very limited time in which to convert his manuscript into the completed book. This is our opportunity to show you how quickly books can be turned out in an emergency. If there is a larger composing room in the country devoted exclusively to the manufacture of books, we don't know where it is.
